van, and to call Mr. Campbell before the curtain; and this they did. But the artesian well system, and this they did. But the artesian well system, as applied to the drama, though effective, is as applied to the drama, though effective, is painful. There was no call to touch the subject of "The Octoroon" unless it could be treated in a better way, and Mr. Campbell is very far behind his model. The actors handled the coarse material with zeal and tasie, Mr. Scaulon, M. C. Daly, Miss Kemble, Miss Cayvan, Frank Roberts, Gus. Levick and Mr. Ralton, presenting old stare types with marked skill. The piece had a haif-way success with the house, but dwindled to a feeble close amid gentle apathy.

MADAME PATTI'S FAREWELL.

Madame Patti's final performance before her departure for Europe was given in the Germania Theatre last night. The opera was "Lucia di Lammermora."
The audience was not so large in the early part of the evening as the gatherings which greeted her on the last three or four nights of her subscription season, but the house filled up densely before the third act, and there was boundless enthusiasm. During the last scene of opers in which Lucia figures the people were quite uncontrollable. She was not permitted to fin-tesh the scene before the excited appliance came, and it was with difficulty that the listeners could be prevented from demanding a repeatition of every little division in from demanding a repetite the passages with flute obligato the piece. As it was, the passages with flute obligato had to be given twice, and likewise the close. With the pleasure which her marvellous singing gave, and which d siready found extravagant expression, there now mingle a sincere regret at the parting ween artist and public. The people were loth to let her go. Before the curtain fell cries of "brava!" ad-chappings brought her again to the footlights rain and again she attempted to retire, but her adnirers would not have it so. She piled her arms with quets that were thrown upon the stage until she could carry no more, while a veritable giant of a bass ger made several loads out of the floral designs which were handed over the prompter's box. Yet the applause ould not down; and it was only after the curtain had been lifted three or four times that the people because reconciled to the thought that the concluding note had been sung, and this was the last look, the final curtsey

In the performance Madame Patti united in herself all that there was to commend. There was a perfunctory air about everything except Madame Patti's singing; the chorus was lugubrious and the orchestra persistently

C. J. VANDERBILT'S SUICIDE.

THE CIRCUMSTANCES THAT LED UP TO IT. RECENT INDUIGENCE IN HIS FORMER PASSION FOR GAMBLING-GREAT DEPRESSION IN CONSEQUENCE OF LOSSES-THE FUNERAL TO TAKE PLACE TO-DAY.

There were some distressing developments vesterday, which threw considerable light on the causes that led to the suicide of Cornelius J. Vanderbilt, at the Glenham Hotel, on Sunday afternoon. The reason for the act assigned by his acquaintances and friends on Sunday night was despondency produced by the sufferings from epileptic fits, to which Vanderbilt was subject from his boyhood. It was learned yesterday that within the last few months he had indulged largely in the passion for gambling, which was a weakness of his early manhood, and that his losses had been heavy. He also had been harassed by the importunities of persons claiming that he owed them money for services which are believed to have been connected with games of hazard. Added to worriment over these matters was the anxiety which he expressed in regard to his litigation with Scott Lord, one of his counsel in the contest over the will of the late Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt. The depression of mind caused by a severe epileptic attack two days before his death, was aggravated by an unfortunate indulgence in his greatest failing on the night before his suicide. This is believed to have been the primary motive for his act.

It was in his early manhood, when he was not engaged in active business, that Mr. Vanderbilt formed doubtful habits and made unfortunate acquaintances, many of which he tried to shake off in later years. After the settlement of the Vanderbilt will contest in April, 1879, by which Cornelius J. received a large sum of money, partly in cash and partly placed in trust, he abandoned almost cupitively his gambling indulgences. For some time afterward he was pressed by legitimate creditors and those who had taken advantage of his early vices. His business arrangements with the former class, however, had been satisfactority arranged, although he was annoyed by the chaims of the other class. He speculated somewhat in Wall Street, but the statements made regarding his speculative gains or losses are conflicting. He was interested to some extent in mining properties, and at the time of his death was president of the Vandewater Gold and Silver Mining Company, at No. 115 Broadway. He death was president of the Vandewater Gold and Silver Mining Company, at No. 115 Broadway. He assumed that position after the recent reorganization of the company. Some loss in his investments was caused by the long continued depression in the mining interest. During the last few months he yielded to his old passion for gambling, and is un derstood to have lost considerably. "Eph" Simmons, the notorious gambler, was a close companion of Mr. Vanderbilt, but some time ago their acquaintance was terminated, and Simmons has been urging a large claim for "services" against his friend.

MOVEMENTS PRIOR TO THE SUICIDE. About two years ago Mr. Vanderbilt travelled in Europe, accompanied by George Terry, his travelling companion. His acquaintance with Mr. Terry dates back twenty years, but the latter has not been his companion except for a few years. Mr. Terry formerly was clerk in the United States Hotel, and afterward in the Hoffman House. In last January Mr. Vanderbilt went to Chicago with Mr, Terry and his private secretary and business man ager, Major E. D. Luxton, to attend to business matters. Almost immediately afterward Mr. Vanmatters. Almost immediately afterward Mr. Vanderbilt went to Hot Springs, Ark., and then to Florisia, for his health. He returned to this city on March 20, and with Mr. Terry took rooms at the Glenham Hotel. He had for several years boarded at the Grand Hotel, and had been expected there on March 25. To avoid the importunities of creditors and, to use the words of a person who knew of the matter, the "hangers-on that always worry wealthy men," he left instructions that his new address should not be given to caliers at the Grand Hotel.

On last Friday Mr. Vanderbilt was taken with an epileptic attack at breakfast in the basement cale

On last Friday Mr. Vanderbilt was taken with an epileptic attack at breakfast in the basement cafe of the Glenham, where he took his meals in order to avoid the possibility of such a scene in the regular restaurant of the hotel. "Fha. afternoon he had a long interview with E. O., Perrin and L. and G. E. Asidey, his attorneys, respecting his business matters and litigations. The claim of Scott Lord for fees additional to those paid him for acting for Mr. Vanderbilt in the contest over his father's will had been sent to a referee, before whom the case was to come upyesterday morning. Mr. Perrin says that Mr. Vanderbilt was particular in impressing upon his mind the necessity of meeting him at the Glenham on Sunday morning at 11 octock, and was considerably worried over the matters discussed at the consultation. On Saturday evening Mr. Terry left Mr. Vanderbilt downtown in Broadway. It was not until Sunday morning, about 6 o'clock, that Mr. Vanderbilt came into his hotel. He had spent the night at No. 12 Ann-st., a well-known gambling house. He awakened Mr. Terry and specked of the series of the series of the sus was done on the base was deep of the liquer traffic has de which the was doing, put a pistol to his head and shot limited; with the local many linguing the possibility of such a scene in the regular was another the effects of one of his fits.

Later Major Laxion saw him on business admins, over which there was an anxious discussion. At last Mr. Vanderbiit underseed and lay down to try to get some sleep, first sending word to the hotel office that he could see no one, and that it Mr. Perrine called to keep his 11 o'clock appointment he should be told to come later. At 1:15 p. m. the suicide was committed. Mr. Terry had been taking a map for about an hour and a half when he was aroused by the report of the pistol from the adjoining room, Mr. Vanderbiit, it is said, had always been in the habit of carrying a pissol or revolver. rying a pistoi or revolver.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FUNERAL. The body of Mr. Vanderbilt was removed from the hotel at 7 a. m. yesterday to the Church of the Strangers. Arrangements for the burial were made with William H. Vanderbilt by H. T. Atkinson, the sexten of the church. After the funeraservices at the church to-day at 9:15 a. m. the body will be sent by a special train at 10:30 a. m. from the Grand Central wife, who died some years ago, and several members of the family are buried. The body was viewed by the Coroner and his jury yesterday, but no other persons were permitted to see it, except Dr. Charles F. Deems, the minister of the Church of the Strangers.

William H. Vanderbilt could not be seen at his house yesterday with regard to his brother's death. Cornelius Vanderbilt, his eldest son, who was found at the Grand Central Depot by a TRIBUNE found at the Grand Central Depot by a Trinux's reporter, said: "There is nothing new to-day, so far as I know, respecting the unhappy affair of Sunday. I did not go to the Glenham Hotel on Sunday, but I saw my father after he had been there. He said that his brother was unconscious all the time, and nothing could have been done to save him. I have not seen my uncle since his return from the South I know nothing about Mr. Terry; he was intimate with my uncle for fully twenty years. I believe they met just in Hartford. It is impossible to tell whether the shooting was accidental or suicidal."

suicidal."

"Yes," said Chauncey M. Depow, who was in the room, "he might have been taken with one of his fits while handling the weapon, and in his struggles it might readily have gone off."

Mr. Vanderbilt added that his uncle had suffered for many years from epilepsy, and looked every time he saw him as if he would not live six months. He did not believe that Cornolius J. had speculated much in stocks.

THE CORONER'S INVESTIGATION. The certificate of death which Coroner Brady is sued at the Glenham Hotel on Sunday was sent to the Bureau of Vital Statistics yesterday afternoon On this certificate a permit was given for the removal of Mr. Vanderbilt's body to Hartford, Conn The cause of death was given as a "shot-wound through the head, self-inflicted while laboring under great mental excitement." The inquest will be summon all the witnesses who were present at the time of Mr. Vanderbilt's death. The jury of physi-cians already selected to investigate the death of Eaward von Eichemau will sit also in the case of Mr. Vanderbilt. held on Thursday at 3 p. m., and Coroner Brady will

In conversation with a Tribune reporter yesterday, Coroner Brady said: 'Mr. Perrin came to my house a little before 7 o'clock Sunday evening, and asked me to investigate the death of Mr. Vanuerbilt. He said that 'Corneel' had shot himself at the Glenham Hotel at 2 p. m., and had died at 6 o'clock. I went to the house of my deputy, Dr. Raelle, and we reached the hotel about 8:15. The body of Mr. Vanderbilt lay on a bed in his room. The pillow and bed-clothing were covered with blood, and on the pillow near Mr. Vanderbilt's head was a pistol bullet somewhat flattened. I was told that the bullet had passed through his head and had dropped on the pillow where it lay. A Smith & Wesson revolver of 38-calibre was on the bureau in the room, and I was told by Mr. Terry that the weapon had been found clasped in Mr. Vanderbilt's hand immediately after the shooting. The face of the dead man was blackened with burnt powder on the right side, In conversation with a TRIBUNE reporter yester-

and there were powder marks on his right hand. I noticed a pistol-shot wound in the head. Dr. Kaefle probed the wound. The bullet had penetrated the head in front of the right car at the upper end of the jaw-bone. It had been deflected a livile by straking the root of the nose, and had passed out of the head just over the left car. I took the verbal statements of Mr. Perrin, Mr. Terry and Major Luxton, who said he was Mr. Vanderbilt's private secretary, and I was convinced that it was a case of spicide. I inferred from what was said that Mr. Vanderbilt was not out of his room on Saturday or Saturday night, and that he had not left his bed on Sunday before sheoting himself except for a short time. It was thought that he had left his bed just long enough to get his revolver from a trunk in his room, and that he had left his bed just long enough to get his revolver from a trunk in his room, and that he had shot himself as soon as he got into bed again. I examined a number of papers which I found in the room, and I saw nothing to show any premeditation on the part of Mr. Vanderbilt. So far as I could learn, Mr. Vanderbilt had written nothing and had said nothing previous to the shooting to throw any light upon his motive for self-destruction."

WHAT SOME OF MR. VANDERBILT'S FRIENDS SAY.

WHAT SOME OF MR. VANDERBILT'S FRIENDS SAY. One of the friends of Cornelius J. Vanderbilt, who has maintained very intimate relations with him for several years, said yesterday that he did not believe that Mr. Vanderbilt committed suicide in a conscions moment. He had, for almost the first time in his life, got his affairs arranged so that there was something to live for, and so that he could be comparatively free from the harassments of creditors. From the settlement of the suits against his prother William H. Vanderbilt mind that he was in before the settlement of the will contest. It was suggested that this has been the cause of the break-between him and Scott Lord, the lawyer who had guided him through the suits and contest growing out of Commodore Vanderbilt's will and most of his subsequent litigation; Mr. Vanderbilt had remained still attached to Mr. Lord, Vanderbilt had remarned still attached to Mr. Lord, but his finemeial embarrassment had led him into the course of c-nduct which separated them.

Ethan Allen, who was associated with Mr. Lord in the Vanderbilt will contest, said that he first learned of the smeale when he read it in The Trenunc at his breakinst table. It was a great shock and surprise to him, because he thought that Mr. Vanderbilt was well out of his worst troubles. Mr. Allen said that he had not seen much of Mr. Vanderbilt for several months; but he did not think his losses in Wall Street were at all heavy. He sometimes exhibited a rockless sort of generosity toward his friends; but he was really much more shrewd in money matters than he was ordinarily given credit for. He had, in fact, something of his father's disposition in looking after the details of money matters and seeing where the small sums of money were going. So far from losing in of money were going. So far from losing in Wall Street, the last time Mr. Vanderbiit spoke to him on the subject he said that he had been very fortunate; that he had made large sums been very fortunate; that he had made large sums of money—something like half a million." "Cornelius J. Vanderbilt," Mr. Allen continued, "was maturally a shrewd, intelligent, anniable man, and whatever of the contrary disposition he has shown of late years has been due to the fits of epilepsy that came upon him so frequently. No doubt in his younger years he was irregular in his habits. But for the last eight or ten years there has scarcely been a man in town who has led a straighter life. He has been temperate, and has included in no form of dissipation. But there was hanging over him always the fear of these lits. For a long time he had them three or four times a week, and it was seldom that he was free from them for a whole month. I do not think there was a particle of insanity about the man; but it is quite probable that in one of those lits he has, without knowing what he was doing, put a pistol to his head and shot himself."

remembered many of the friends, including his law-yers. He afterward found that this did not suit him, and had another one drawn by a friend in Providence, R. I. The rupture between him and Mr. Lord in the last year, so changed his relations toward him and others of those whom he had re-membered in former wills, that it is thought that he made still another will within the last few months.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE. THE PRIMARY ELECTIONS BILLS-A NEW BUILDING

LAW PROPOSED FOR NEW-YORK CITY-BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS INTRODUCED. INY TREEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.

ALBANY, April 3 .- The bills to insure the purity of primary elections introduced by Erastus Breoks and Mr. Hickman were the subject of debate in the Assembly to-night. Mr. Brooks and Mr. Hickman described at great length the corruption of the present primary elections, and argued that these elections ought o be as much protected by law as the regular election Mr. Brooks's chief argument was that under the present system minorities instead of majorities actually Depot to Hartford, Conn. The interment will take blace in the cometry lot where Mr. Vanderbilt's corrupt caucuses described by Mr. Brooks did exist in the country districts. Mr. Alvord made the same statement, adding that he would support an amendment making the bill apply only to the cities of New-York and Brooklyn and the County of Rich mond. Finally, upon motion of Mr. Brooks, the bills were made a special order for Monday next.

Assemblyman Putten attempted to force a vote on his resolution denouncing Minister Lowell for his course concerning the Irish-American "suspects." Mr. Alvord objected to the consideration of the resolution and it went over. Mr. Van Allen introduced a bill prepared by Inspector Esterbrook of the Bureau of Buildings, of New-York, providing stricter building laws for that city. The bill providing stricter building laws for that city. The bill regulates the dopth of foundations, thickness of side walls, openings for doors and windows, strength of floors of all classes of buildings, etc. The bill also regulates the interior arrangements of tenement houses; and the Superintendent of Buildings is to designate the modes of egress. JESSE JAMES, THE BANDIT, KILLED.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEAD BY A MEMBER OF HIS OWN GANG WHO SAYS HE IS A DETECTIVE. St. Joseph, Mo., April 3 .- A great sensation

was created in this city this morning by the announce-ment that Jesse James, the notorious bandit and train robber, had been shot and killed here. The news spread with great rapidity, but most persons received it with doubt until investigation established the fact beyond question. Then the excitement became more and more intense, and crowds of people rushed to th quarter of the city where the shooting had occurred, anxious to view the body of the dead outlaw and to learn all particulars. In a small frame shanty in the southeast part of the city, on the hill, not far from the World's Hotel, Jesse James has lived with his wife since some time in November last. Bebert and Charles Ford, two of his gang, have made their headquarters at shanty ever since November; Robert arrived about ten days ago; and the three have been making preparafront room together about nine o'clock this morning. James took off his belt and laid his pistols on the bed, preparing to wash himself, when Robert Ford sprang preparing to wash himself, when Robert Ford sprang up behind him and sent a bullet through his brain. The ball entered the back of his head to the right of the base of the brain, coming out over the eye. The Ford brothers at once made known what what they had done, and gave themselves up. They are now under guard at the Court House. The body of Jesse James was convoyed to an undertaker's, where it was prepared for burial and where a photograph was taken. James's wife has telegraphed to his mother the news of his death. A number of men have bleathfield the body, and there is no question about it being that of Jesse James. A look at the body, while it was being photographed at the undertaker's, showed that he was a fine looking man, apparently forty years old, with broad forchead, and his physiognomy was that of an intelligent as well as a resolute and daring man. The house where James lived, and in which he was killed, has the appearance of an armory. A number of guns and navy revolvers, with a good store of ammention, were found there. Jesse was in the nabit of wearing two beits, with a brace of vory fine revolvers and twenty-live extra cartridges. In a small stable, near the house, were discovered accept.

Police Commissioner Craig left here for St. Joseph with a heavily armed posse of men to guard James's body and give protection to the man who hilled him. At the police staten it was learned that Rob. ert Ford, a young man who has been hanging about the station for several weeks post, was the person who shot and killed Jesse James. Ford left this city about a week ago and joined James is the vicinity of St. Joseph, remaining with him until an epportuality to kill him was found. From the police it is learned that Ford, who is believed to be a member of the gang, was under the control of Commissioner Craig, and has been used as an instrument for James's destruction. Ford is about twenty-two years of age, and looks like a verdant yeath from the country. In appearance he is a mere boy, and is the last person in the world to be taken as the slayer of the famous outlaw.

BOSTON POLICE MANAGEMENT.

MAYOR GREEN REMOVES THE COMMISSIONERS AND NOMINATES THEIR SUCCESSORS.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.] Boston, April 3.-Police Commissioners Henry Walker, Thomas J. Gargan and Edward J. A NEW PROFESSOR FOR COLUMBIA.

Professor Thomas R. Price was yesterday elected by the Board of Trustees of Columbia College to fill the chair of English Literature. In the last sever investigated and discussed. Professor Price is forty years old, and received his early education in the South, having received the degree of M. A. from the University of Virginia in 1858. He then went to Germany, and studied in the University of Berlin. After completing his studies there he travelled in Greece several months, and then lived in Paris a short time. Returning to this country after the war, he established a school for boys in Richmond, Va., which he left to accept a professorship of Greek and English, in Handelph-Macon College, near Richmond, where he remained ten years While in Richmond he was associated with Professor B. L. Gildersleeve, now of Johns Hopkins University, in the preparation of the first part of his Latin grammar, and is highly commended in the prefuce of that book by Professor Gildersleeve. At Rando ph-Macon College Professor Price was very successful as a teacher. He succeeded Professor Gildersleeve in the chair of Greek in the University of Virginia, a position which he has held for five years. Although he is now illing a Greek pofessor ship, he has made the study of English literature a speciality, it being his favorite study. His lectures are said to be strong, clear, practical and exhaustive. His manner is nervous, energetic and incistive, but affaile. As there has been considerable discussion at Columbia College regarding the religious belief of the candidates, it may be stated that Professor Price is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, of which his grandfather, the Rev. Dr. Moore, was a Bishop. The new professor will not assume his duties until next October, the classes in English literature being taught this year by Professor Quackenbos. the preparation of the first part of his Latin grammar,

A MYSTERY IN AN EXPRESS OFFICE.

D. McCarthy, an employe in the American Express Company's office at Madison-ave, and Forty-eighth st., was hardling a package covered with brown wrapping paper at that place yesterday afternoon when he saw through a hole in the paper something that looked the flesh. On closer examination a small band was discovered. McCarthy's suspicions were aroused, and the police of the Nineteenth Sub-Precinct were informed. Officer Kavanaugh, on opening the were informed. Officer Kavannagh, on opening the package, found the bodies of two dead children. One, a male child, was apparently three years old. The other, a female infant, was apparently six weeks old. The package had the following address: "Processor Garo, Cornell College, Ithaca, N. Y." The bodies were sent to the Morane. No one at the express office know who brought the package there, except that it was a who brought the package there, except that I was man of medium height. OBLIGED TO PROVE HER HUSBAND'S DEATH

Mr. Everett, American Charge d'Affairs at Berlin, has asked the Board of Health to change the record of the death of Mendel Pedeiberg so that the name would appear as Abraham Mendel Periberg, as this was the man's right name. Affidavits to this effect from the widow and relatives of the dead man were submitted with the letter. The dead man, it stated, had left an estate in Russia to which his wife was heir. Her claims to this could not be made good only ins to this could ust be made good unless she ms to this could ust be made good unless she ted within a cercain period a duly certified rec-husband's death. The Board of Health will her husband's deal the matter to-day.

THE LATE MR. HURLBUI ON SHIPHERD.

CHICAGO, April 3.-E. H. Talbott, a relative by marriage of the late Minister S. A. Huribut, recently received from Mr. Huribut a letter in which he rest assured that I, at all events, and not complicated in the least degree with any discreditable project, and that I have taken all proper means to keep the proof where it ought to be.

This man Shipherd is a curious mixture of the knave and the fool, with a decided preponderance of the former. His project is meane, has no foundation in law or equity. His project is meane, has no foundation in law or equity, has no evidence of any kind in its favor, but there is somebody behind it. Shipherd himself, from his reported interviews, is a portentous liar, but somebody believes in him. I sent long ago to the Department a full examination and rejection of his schemes, and have also sent back to the Department his very extraordinary letter to me. All these will soon be in the possession of Congress, and my vindication will be complete as to that. But I think the United States are going to back down from the position I have held here, and this compels my return home. I have written the Secretary that if the Government proposes such action I cannot and will not represent it any longer."

CELEBRATING JEFFERSON'S BIRTHDAY.

NEW-HAVEN, Conn., April 3 .- The Jeffersonian Club of this city eclebrated the anniversary of the birthday of Thomas Jefferson at their rooms on Chapel st. this evening. A large number of invited guests from various parts of the State was present. Letters of regret were read from ex-Governor R. D. Hubbard, were read from ex-Governor R. D. Hubbard, Congressman James Phelps, ex-Governor English, ex-Governor Pond, General Hancock, Samuel J. Tilden and other Democrats.
